AN EVERYDAY STORY

The Story After the Last Story

At bedtime, one story becomes two, then a glass of water, then a question about the moon. You love the warm weight of your child beside you. You also want a shower, ten quiet minutes, and a body that belongs to you again. When you close the book and say, “That's all tonight,” tears appear. Guilt immediately offers another chapter.

As a Cinnamon Roll parent, you wrap discomfort in warmth. You know how to soothe, soften, and make room. But comfort that always costs your last piece of energy eventually stops feeling tender.

Tonight you keep the boundary. “I know you want another one. I'll stay for one hug, and the answer is still finished.” You breathe through the protest instead of bargaining with it.

Later, warm water runs over your shoulders. The house did not become less loving because you ended the ritual. Your child met disappointment and remained accompanied; you met your own need and remained a caring parent. Warm and firm were never opposites. They were always meant to share the same oven.

WHAT TO REMEMBER

WHAT OFTEN HAPPENS

You instinctively offer hugs, flexibility, and comfort. You can feel guilty whenever you need to disappoint your child or choose a need of your own.

RELEASE THE GUILT

Keeping your child comfortable is not the only form of love. Holding a reasonable boundary, even through protest, is care too.

WHAT TO REMEMBER

Try this week

- [ ] Hold one small boundary
- [ ] Accept one offer of help without repaying it
- [ ] Say: “I know you really want it. I will stay with the sadness, and the answer is still no.”

EXTRAS FOR YOUR STYLE

- [ ] Write the three things that will definitely happen tomorrow, and stick it on the fridge.
- [ ] Explain one rule once, then stop explaining it.
- [ ] Just once, listen all the way to the end without offering a solution.
- [ ] Hold back one "be careful" today.

FOR YOU FIRST

5 ways to come back to yourself

Chosen from your style: what you spend yourself on is what needs releasing. Not one of these is for your child.

There's an order most of us have backwards: everyone else gets looked after first, and you get whatever is left. But what's left at nine at night isn't you — it's the part of you that never got to rest.

The next five pages don't ask you to be a better parent. Nothing here is counted, nothing is reported, and not one of them is for your child. They're all for you, and they aren't a reward you have to earn first.

What's on them isn't random either. Every parenting style spends itself differently: some parents run out from anticipating, some from deciding, some from holding everybody's feelings. So whatever drains you most is also what most needs releasing.

WHAT DRAINS YOU MOST

F — HOW YOU ORGANIZE THE DAY

Deciding without a rail. Every hour asks for a fresh decision.

C — WHO SETS THE DIRECTION

Steering. You're the one who always has to know the next move.

T — WHEN THE FEELINGS GET BIG

Absorbing feelings. Your ears have been on shift since morning.

N — COMFORT ZONE OR STRETCH ZONE

Vigilance. Everyone's sense of safety is parked with you.

FOR YOU FIRST

Ask what you want before automatically making everyone else comfortable.

HOW TO USE THESE

Take just one. If only one of these gets used this week, that worked. The rest stay here; they aren't going anywhere.

No time this week? You are still enough.

TIME 5 MIN

One drink while it's still hot

Almost every parent drinks their coffee cold. Not from lack of time, but because there is always one more thing that comes first.

Sit down. Finish the whole thing at its actual temperature, doing nothing else at the same time.

TIME 2 MIN

One anchor for tomorrow

You decide all day because your day has no rail. One fixed point isn't a schedule; it's one less decision.

Pick one thing that will happen at the same time tomorrow. The same breakfast, the same song, the same walk.

TIME 10 MIN

Hand over the wheel for ten minutes

What tires you isn't the work, it's being the one who decides. Ten minutes of not being in charge is real rest.

Let someone else decide something real and small, and do not improve their decision afterwards.

ILLUSTRATION TO COME

TIME 10 MIN

Ten minutes with no voices

Your ears have been on shift since morning — hearing, naming, soothing. Ten wordless minutes isn't loneliness, it's a break.

No podcast, no music with words, no conversation. Ten minutes.

TIME 10 MIN

One step outside, alone

Your vigilance never clocks out. Ten minutes outside proves the house holds without you watching it.

Ten minutes outside the door by yourself, phone in your pocket and unchecked.

Peekaboo, with a scarf

The oldest turn-taking game there is, played at your baby's pace instead of yours.

1. Drape a light scarf over your own face, not theirs.
2. Wait for their sound or reach before you reveal.
3. Stop the moment they look away — that's them saying done.

You'll need: One light, breathable scarf.

Safety first: The scarf goes over you, never the baby. Never leave fabric on or near a baby's face.

Hand me the laundry

Real work, done together, with no standard to meet. Toddlers want to take part, not to be entertained.

1. Sit by the basket and hand them one item at a time.
2. Let them put it in the machine or the pile.
3. Thank them for the work, not for doing it neatly.

You'll need: The laundry you already have.

Safety first: Machine door closed and off when unattended. Keep detergent capsules completely out of the room.

Wash one cup

One whole task with a visible beginning and end. At this age, a finished job means more than praise.

1. Set a low station: bowl, sponge, towel.
2. Demonstrate the sequence once.
3. Leave them to it, including the parts they do badly.

You'll need: A bowl of warm water, a small sponge, one unbreakable cup, a towel.

Safety first: Warm not hot. Soap that doesn't sting eyes. The stool must be stable.

Draw anything, I'll just be here

"What is it?" makes a child guess the answer you want. Describing what you see asks nothing of them.

1. Paper and crayons, both of you at the table.
2. Describe colours, movements, choices — "you used a lot of blue there".
3. Never ask "what is it?", and never correct a colour or a shape.

You'll need: Paper and crayons.

One real step in the cooking

Not pretend cooking. One genuine step of the meal the family actually eats, done by them.

1. Choose one safe step: tearing lettuce, peeling a banana, spreading butter, stirring off the heat.
2. Give them the real tool, child-sized if you have one.
3. At the table, say out loud which part they made.

You'll need: Whatever you're already cooking.

Safety first: Nothing at the stove, nothing sharp, nothing hot. Hands washed, and an adult stays in the kitchen.
